PREFACE

On the recommendation of the Indian Historical Records Commission in 1923, the Government of India agreed to have the more important pre-1859 records at the National Archives of India properly indexed. It was, however, soon discovered that exhaustive indexing was not only time consuming but also required great technical skill on the part of the staff engaged. Temporarily abandoned, the question of compiling indexes was revived in 1940. Since then two volumes of Index to Land Revenue Records 1830-37 and 1838-59 and first volume of Foreign and Political Department Records 1756-80 have seen the light of day. The present volume brings the index to Foreign and Political Department Records up to 1783. Although it covers only three years, the material included is fairly voluminous and is replete with events of great significance in the early history of the expansion of British rule in India. Every endeavour has been made to give the student an accurate idea as to the scope and nature of documents dealt with in the Index.

In view of the recommendation of the Committee on Archival Legislation issued in 1960 that "the present elaborate and expensive process of indexing entire series of records be given up and be replaced by the comparatively cheap and less elaborate task of descriptive listing", there seems no possibility in the near future of continuing and completing the indexing programme of the National Archives.

For the inordinate delay in preparing and producing this Volume, I crave the indulgence of the reader. Paucity of trained staff and complicated method of work conspired to undo our best efforts.

Lastly I cannot but place on record my great appreciation of the staff of the Indexing Branch who, though heavily depleted, have spared no efforts to complete the task. But for their unstinted toil and labour, it would not have been possible to bring out this volume in the present form.

INTRODUCTION

The second volume of the Index to the Foreign and Political Department Records begins from where the first volume broke off i.e., 1781, but covers only three years in view of the increasing accumulation of records in the Foreign Department as a result of the wars with the Marathas and Mysore. The series of the Foreign Department included in the present volume are :

I Secret Branch

II Foreign Branch

III Secret and Separate Branch

While it has been possible for a single Secretary to hold the dual charge of Home and Foreign Departments in which the work of the United East India Company had been hitherto distributed, by September 1783 he found his task too unwieldy for him. As such, the Board resolved on 23 September 1783 to separate the two Departments more completely by appointing a Secretary to each, Mr. William Bruere to be "Secretary to the General or Public Department" and Mr. Edward Hay to be "Secretary to the Political or Secret Department". The functions of the latter Department were to comprise "all subjects of a Political Nature, all the Correspondence with the Presidents and Select Committees at the other Presidencies, also with the Councils there on Political affairs, all the Correspondence with the Residents at Foreign Courts and at Benares, all Transactions with Foreign Nations and Powers and every Military Operation or Movement of Troops which is either ordered or undertaken".

An excellent account of the Company's encounters with Indian as well as rival European Powers, both diplomatic and military, emerges from the Secret Department records. The Policies and intrigues of different parties, their constantly changing patterns of friendship and hostility, these and a number of other interesting subjects find a place in these records. Some of the questions discussed in the Secret records are : fluctuating fortunes of the combatants in the Second Mysore War and the battles of Porto Novo and Wandiwash; naval skirmishes between the French and the British; turgid course of the first Maratha War culminating in the treaty of Salbai; Chait Singh's revolt; intrigues at the Delhi Court; Company's financial dealings with Asaf-ud-Daulah; and exploration of Andaman and Nicobar as suitable harbours.

The Foreign Branch (or Department as it was then called) emanated from the Secret Department on 10 December 1783 when it was decided that proceedings in respect to foreign nations should be recorded in a separate department under the charge of the Secretary to the Secret Department. Thus very few records belonging to this Series come within the purview of this Index. Some of the topics mentioned are : French deserters and prisoners of war; transport of rice by Danish authorities from Serampore to Tranquebar; and transfer of Dutch prisoners to Ceylon.

Created in 1761 the Secret and Separate Branch continued its proceeding right up to 1811, and as its designation implies, it was confined to the consideration of certain special questions as and when they arose Some of the subjects covered by this branch during 1781-83 are seizure of Chinsura on outbreak of war with Holland, capture of the Dutch Settlements in Bengal and connected transactions, appointment of Indians and Europeans in law courts of Chandernagore, and import of spices into Bengal from Batavia

In transliterating Indian place names the Imperial Gazetteer of India and the Provincial Gazetteers have been mainly followed When however, a particular name was not available in the gazetteers, the Century Atlas spelling has been accepted Oriental words have generally been transliterated according to Wilson's Glossary of Judicial and Revenue Terms These have been printed in italics, as also the names of ships, newspapers and books

The references cited after the entries are to the Series, the date, the months, the year and the number of the original consultation in that order For example SS 2 May 83(A H) indicates Secret and Separate Department, 2 May 1783, consultation nos A H When only the Series and the Year are given, the bold figure within the brackets indicates the proceeding volume number followed by page number Thus S 81 (46, 630) indicates Secret Department 1781, volume no 46 and page 630

The headings have been arranged alphabetically and the entries under them chronologically But chronological order has occasionally been disturbed to bring analogous subjects together

When there are too many entries under a heading, they have been grouped under suitable sub headings arranged alphabetically

The condition and distinguishing features of the individual papers have been indicated by means of italicised letters in round brackets, thus—

- 1 Discrepancies between three classes of documents (i e, Original Consultations, Proceedings volumes and Body Sheets) in the matter of dates, spellings of names, and/or omissions, by (a)
- 2 Paper damaged, defective, unsigned by the writer, illegible, stamped with seal, by (b)
- 3 Paper signed by the Governor-General as a Member of the Board by (c) When it bears his original signature, by (A), and if it is entirely written by him, by (H)
- 4 Original consultation or Proceeding Volume missing, by (d)
- 5 Duplicate available, by (e)
- 6 Resolution of the Board recorded on the Original Consultation, by (f)
- 7 Concurrence of the Governor General or a Member of the Board in a draft, etc, by (g)
- 8 Matter recorded in the Body sheet only, by (h)

A glossary has been given after the main index to explain obsolete, unfamiliar or non English words occurring in the documents A short bibliography of works consulted for reconciliation of old geographical names with modern names, identification of names of civil and military officers and fixation of chronology, is given after the glossary at the end of the volume A list of abbreviations and contractions used will be found on page ix
